Academic Year 2015/2016

05/03/2016

The children all seemed to have a fabulous day celebrating World Book Day. There was certainly plenty of literary discussions occurring around school and some great books and stories produced for specific audiences. It was lovely to hear how the children interacted across the age groups to discover the types of books enjoyed. We are all too quick these days to say we have not got the time to read for pleasure, we as the adults must model this and embrace the love of reading with our children. Bedtime stories are a very special time and I am sure we can all remember those feelings of being warm and snug in our beds listening to the fantastic tales our parents read to us.
